Manager of the GAZETTE.

The Washington correspondent of the Boston Advertiser compares Senator Cullom with Lincoln and thinks the presidential chances of the former are good. This is meaner than any remark about Lincoln made by any southerner since the war.

It is to be hoped that the investigation of the "trusts," which is to be made by the house committee on manufactures, will be thorough and rigid. The people want to know what these trusts are and how they operate, side from any influence which they may have on the tariff or free trade question.

We have received a copy of the Daily [Chicago] News almanac for 1888. It is by far the most complete almanac that this newspaper has ever published, and is more complete in its political information for the west than any other of the almanacs. It is especially full in its statistics on prohibition and saloon statistics. The price of this is twenty cents.

The Washington correspondent of the Philadelphia Press gives it out cold that Senator Stanford, on account of his vote to confirm Lamar, "will receive very few courtesies at the hands of the republican majority." In proof of this, he says, "In this connection, it may be stated that the deficiency bill, which passed the house a few days ago, was reported back to the senate committee on appropriations, appropriating $5,000 to the Pacific Railroad commissioners, in liquidation of a judgment obtained in the court of claims." This is a good way and is not to be objected to as a matter of principle.

The coming state election in Louisiana promises to be a rousing affair. The republicans think they have a fair show of success. All they want is a fair ballot and an honest count. While Gov. McEnery declares they shall have. His position on this question is easily understood when it is known that he was elected for the democratic nomination for governor after a long and bitter struggle. It is said that the governor can control effectively little—but the success of the ticket, and many of his own party believe that he will find a great satisfaction in its defeat. His zeal for an honest election has not arisen from any patriotic resolve, though such may be the chosen phrase. It is refreshing to note a Louisiana democrat that says such a problematical position on the question.

Mr. Charles A. Pillsbury, a leading Minnesota politician of himself to think that Blaine can be elected. He has recently returned to Minneapolis from an extended eastern trip, and characterizes his observations on this subject in the following forcible language:

"Blaine can not be elected, and his nomination means defeat. Personally I don't want to see him president. The young men who do the whooping 'er up do a good deal talking for Blaine, but the older heads don't agree with them. Cleveland is the favorite with his party and will get another nomination certainly. Very few are sanguine enough to think Blaine could carry New York. In fact they rather think it would go overwhelmingly for Cleveland. The anti-Blaine men are good republicans, but they distrust Blaine and his policy. If the issue were Blaine or Cleveland, most of them would vote for Cleveland. Conservative republicans think that an entirely new candidate must be nominated—one not at present a dark horse—and with such a man at the head of the ticket, a good, clean man, there will be no doubt of republican victory. I think the tariff reform is going to cut both ways next fall. Every one is glad the issue was forced by the president but for different reasons. A fair judgment, I think is that it will almost recreate party lines. They will be divided on a new basis and a generous slice will be cut from each."

From present appearances New York will not only be the pivotal state in the coming presidential election, but will also occupy the same position with regard to the nominee of the democratic national convention. One of the most striking features of the convention which nominated Mr. Cleveland in 1884 was the opposition which he encountered in his own state. It was only by the cool and conservative methods of his political manager, the late Daniel Manning, that his nomination was accomplished. But the opposition to Mr. Cleveland in his own state seems as determined and outspoken as ever. This was plainly shown in the recent meeting of the democratic central committee of that state where the contest for a member of the national democratic committee to fill the vacancy caused by the death of the former incumbent H. O. Thump on resulted in a tie. The issue between the administration and anti-administration forces was said to have been sharply and clearly defined. Both sides took a deep and active interest in the result which was eminently an anti-administration victory. The reason for the defeat which the administration sustained was due not so much to a dislike for the president as to the popularity of Governor Hill who now stands as a type of the Simon pure Jeffersonian democrat. His administration of the state's affairs has been purely partisan and he has left no stone unturned to help the party. His record as an anti-civil service reformer is highly satisfactory to the spoils element of the party. Backed by all the machinery of the state government, Governor Hill, if he is so disposed, can give Mr. Cleveland a hard and stubborn fight for supremacy with a good show of success. Mr. Cleveland sorely needs the governing influence of Mr. Manning in directing his affairs in that state. If New York fails to support the president it will arouse an opposition to his re-nomination in almost every state. Governor Hill at present holds the key to the situation. He has it in his power to defeat or renominate Mr. Cleveland. Unless the latter enters the convention with the united support of his own state's delegates, his chances of success will be very small. Republicans have little to fear from Governor Hill in the event of his becoming a presidential candidate. He has not a single requisite to attract the independent vote, and his qualifications for the office are quite limited. He would be an easy man to defeat, for his campaign would be purely defensive, with "spoils" for its watchword. The utter fallacy of democratic pretensions is fully shown by such controversies as that which occurred at the above mentioned meeting. It shows that the party as a party does not approve President Cleveland's civil service reform policy, though it fully endorses Governor Hill's position on that question. The party is practically afraid to make itself a party of principles rather than of men. Its professions of reform have always lacked sincerity and the efforts put forth to make it a representative of principles have as yet entirely failed. Republicans can congratulate themselves on the suspicious manner in which the democratic skirmish for the nomination has begun. The opportunity for republican success has never appeared more favorable, and should be carefully and vigorously improved.

His Life Saved by His Ghostly Double.

The Open Grate.

The following incident is related upon the authority of Prof. Tholuck, of Halle university, one of the most eminent theologians of Germany, and the principal ecclesiarch of the Prussian church. He prefaced the account by assuring the writer that it was received from the lips of De Wette himself, immediately after the occurrence—that De Wette was an intimate personal friend, a plain, practical man of remarkably clear and vigorous intellect, with no more poetry and imagination in his nature than just enough to keep him alive. In a word that he would rely upon his coolness of judgment and accuracy of observation under any possible combination of circumstances, as confidently as upon those of any man in the world.

Dr. De Wette, the famous German Bible-scholar, returning home one evening, between 9 and 10 o'clock, was surprised upon arriving opposite the house in which he resided to see a bright light burning in his study. In fact he was rather startled than surprised, for he distinctly remembered to have extinguished the candles when he went out an hour or two previously, locked the door and put the key in his pocket, which, upon feeling for it, was still there.

Pausing a moment to wonder by what means and for what purpose any one could have entered the room, he perceived the shadow of a person apparently occupied about something in a remote corner. Supposing it to be a burglar employed in rifling his trunk, he was upon the point of alarming the police when the man advanced to the window in full view, as if for the purpose of looking out into the street. It was De Wette himself, the scholar, author, professor, his height, size, figure, stoop, his head, his face, his features, eyes, hair, chin, every one, skull-cap, study-gown, cloak tie, all, everything; there was no mistaking him, no denying that whatever the fact De Wette in his own library, and he out in the street, why, he must be somebody else? The doctor instinctively grasped his body with the psychological laws of self-preservation and identity doubtful if he could believe his senses and black were not white; well, being if he were really himself or not, perplexed, bewildered and confounded, gazing at his other likeness looking out of the window. Upon the person retiring from the window, which occurred in a few minutes, De Wette resolved not to dispute the possession of his study with the other doctor before morning, and rang at the door of a house opposite where an acquaintance resided, he asked permission to remain over night.

The chamber occupied by him commanded a full view of the interior of his library, and from the window he could see his other self engaged in study and meditation, now walking up and down the room immersed in thought, now sitting down at the desk to write, now rising to search for a volume among the book shelves and imitating in all respects the peculiar habits of the great doctor engaged at work and busy with calculations. At length, when the cathedral clock had finished striking through rest four and then eleven strokes as German clocks are wont to do an hour before 12, De Wette Number Two manifested signs of returning to rest, took out his watch—the identical large gold one the other doctor in the other chamber felt sure was at that moment safe in his waistcoat pocket—and wound it up, removed a portion of his clothing near to the window, closed the curtains and in a few moments the light disappeared. De Wette Number One, was puzzled little time until convinced that Number Two had disposed himself to sleep, and retired to bed wondering very much what all this could mean.

Rising the next morning, he crossed the street and passed upstairs to his library. The door was fastened, he got the key, opened it and entered. No one was there, everything appeared in precisely the same confusion in which he had left it the evening before—his pen lying across the paper on which he had dropped it on going out, the cloth on the table and the mantelpiece evidently not having been lighted, the window curtains drawn aside as he had left them, in fine, there was not a single trace of any person having been in the room. Had he been dreaming the night before? He must have been. He was growing old, reading was too much for him with his eyes—in fact, he must have been deceived; and it was very foolish of him to have remained away all night. Endeavoring to satisfy his mind with some such observations as these, he remembered he had not yet examined his bedroom. Almost ashamed to make the search, now convinced it was all an hallucination of the senses he crossed the narrow passage way and opened the door. He was there, de-cided. The college boys, mischief brick arch, had fallen during the night filling the room with rubbish and crushing his bed into atoms. De Wette the apparition had saved the life of the great German scholar.

Tholuck, who was walking with the author in the fields near Halle when relating the occurrence, added, upon concluding: "I do not pretend to account for the phenomenon, nor acknowledge scientific or metaphysical in my possession adequate to explain it, but I have no more doubt of actually, positively, literally did occur, than I have of the existence of the sun and moon."

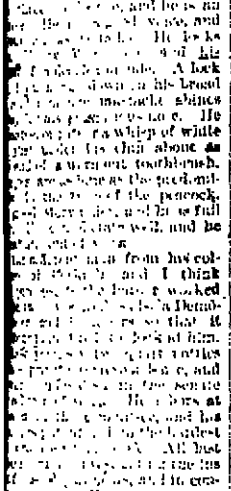
...CRATIC SENATORS.

...ES AND GO SAT ABOUT THE ...GISTRATION LEADERS.



HENRY M. STANLEY.

BEHIND DANCE OF THE GREATEST PLEASURE WHILE IN AFRICA.

How a New York Girl Might Have Won His Name for Immortality, Had Chance—The Explorer's Letter from the Great Lakes.

SENATOR "GOLF" BROWN.

The two South Carolina senators are striking figures and Butler looks like a French count, with his silver mustache shining out from the background of his florid complexion. He is a man of classical culture, and he prides himself on his blood, which is rather blue. He dares back to the duke of Cromal in Ireland, and he has, I doubt not, his own coat of arms. Like Ransom, he was also a Confederate soldier, and he lost his right leg at the battle of Brandy Station. He became a major general and he was elected to the United States senate in 1870.

Wade Hampton has shaved off his side whiskers and with them has gone his likeness to the emperor of Germany. I don't think the change has added to his distinguished air, and his silver mustache looks puny compared with the hair that he lost. Hampton is also blue blooded, and he was a noted cavalry leader during the war. He followed Jefferson Davis when he retreated from Richmond, and he secured until all hope was abandoned, trying to rejoin Davis on his last retreat through the south.

Gen. Walthall, of Mississippi, has Lamar's seat in the senate, and he may come to the front during this session. He is an able lawyer and a good speaker, and he has few if any superiors in the senate. He has a good physique, and his long, thin, yet fairly forceful set off by a flowing hair, which hangs almost to his collar. This hair is combed back from a high forehead, and had it not been for a cultivated face he might be thought to look a little like Beethoven. He is a stronger and firmer in tone, manner, and the chief likeness lies in the length of the hair.

George of Mississippi, is a plain Quaker man. His library, and he owns more than a cent for the books. It is not true however, that his pantaloons were cut out with a circular saw, and he is by no means a lady-dressed man. He is a good lawyer, and he has published a volume of the reports of the high court of errors of the state, and he has been a judge of the supreme court of Mississippi. He is a good lawyer, and has much good common sense. He lives very plainly, though well, at the Ebbitt, in a street car, and does not believe in coachmen with wigs on their heads.

Then I might speak of Colonel Morgan of Alabama, who has perhaps more information than any other senator on swamp, and of Pasco, who is full of plain common sense and by no means stupid; Call of Florida, who is one of the strangest of the Democratic senators, and I'll talk with Isham G. Harris would be chock full of meat. Old Bill Saulsbury gives the lie to the stories of that person who said that a cockle county in Delaware could furnish four statesmen, and as for Dan Voorhees, although the Hall mercenary of the Wabash to well for me to add to his fame.

I close with Joe Brown, of Georgia, and make him my last, though Brown is never the least. His sober, patriarchal face appears modest, and his tones and his gestures are as deliberate as the pistons of a Corliss engine, but they are not to be regarded and he is. Brown is one of the strongest men in the country, and were he worth a million he would be a big boss, perhaps the greatest boss in the senate. He is a favorite with some of the Democratic leaders, and it is hard to tell which is the straighter, Brown's or Gordon's. Both are of the Bourbon type, and his face would form a good coast plate for Horace Greeley. His constitution is iron, and his regular self denial of every kind would be good for the health of a dyspeptic. He is a member of the Baptist church, and like Alexander Stephens, that other noted Georgian, he has aided much with his purse the education of young men. He gave $50,000 not long ago to Mercer University, and he is one of the golden pillars of the Baptist church. He is a man of much courage and will power, and he talks well. He puts his speeches clear head. They are packed full of meat, and they never sound long. Though not much of a mixer or speaker, Brown is like the rest of the senate's sons, in that he goes there all the year.

Mr. W. C. Bradbury, the well known railroad contractor came down from Denver yesterday morning.

Mr. M. Kennedy has an important change in his advertisement this morning. He offers some very desirable bargains

Anderson & Young, the contractors, will soon begin the erection of a frame dwelling house for the Rev. C. C. Dickey on North Tejon street above Monument.

The Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe railroad is now running [illegible] passenger trains to Canon City. Direct connection is made with the morning and afternoon trains.

Hon. David Mershane of Monument, ex-county commissioner, was in the city yesterday. He has quite a force of men at work at Palmer Lake engaged in grading, filling, etc.

In January the work of the Colorado Midland Construction company was about completed, and the entire line will soon be operated and controlled by the railroad company.

Parties desiring to invest moderately in real estate should by all means read the advertisement of the Green Mountain Falls Town and Improvement company in this issue.

The Colorado Midland railway has recently [illegible] the force of workmen in the [illegible] at Colorado City. Sufficient work is now on hand to keep the shops in full operation both day and night.

Under Sheriff William Sexton has returned to this city [illegible] in charge of the court records by Captain Lawson of Troop C, against whom several serious charges have been made.

Mr. Charles E. Aveen left on the Pacific express yesterday morning for a two months' trip to San Francisco, Los Angeles and other places in California. He will go by way of Salt Lake City and return over the Southern Pacific railroad.

On and after February 1st, 1888, the money order and registry department of the Colorado Springs postoffice will close promptly at [illegible] p. m. By order of the postmaster, at J. P. Love postmaster, W. Stibler, assistant postmaster.

Several of our citizens attended the opening performance of the Howard Athenæum company in Denver last Monday evening. They speak in the highest terms of the company and claim it is the finest performance of the kind that has ever been given in Colorado.

Mr. Cr[illegible] Beckwith, a well known [illegible] county rancher, died at his [illegible] thirteen mile[illegible] south of the city on January 30th. The funeral will take place from the Congregational church this afternoon at 1 o'clock. Friends of the family are invited to attend.

A recent issue of a leading Buffalo newspaper contained a flattering notice of a pair of fine carriage horses owned by a gentleman living at Lockport, New York. These horses were sired by George H. Patchen, owned by C. W. Haynes & Co., owners of the Charter Oak ranch, on Little Fountain.

Chief Ferrin of the fire department will shortly interview a number of the prominent citizens of the southern part of the city with regard to a fire alarm bell in that section of the town. It is believed that sufficient interest will be aroused to secure this much needed alarm.

Mr. F. G. Rowe has a few choice lots for sale in a new addition on Ivywild Heights. These lots are not far from the center of the town and command a fine view of the city. Mr. Rowe offers special inducements to early purchasers. This property is among the most desirable in the city.

Professor H. C. Dorgan the instructor in dancing is kept quite busy looking after his various classes. He has now classes in Pueblo, Manitou, and several in this city. His time is almost fully occupied. The success which has thus far attended his efforts is a worthy tribute to his capabilities as an instructor.

The county, through the chairman of the board of county commissioners, L. C. Skinner, has procured the north east quarter of section 10 township 11 south. This land is situated near Manitou park, and was taken up under a special section of the statutes which allows a county to locate government land.

The agent of the Denver, Texas & Gulf railroad who was arrested last week as the representative of the railroad company for violating the ordinance prohibiting railroads from blockading street crossings, paid the costs of the case, and the proceedings were discontinued. The railroad company have now a thorough understanding with the city, and no further action will be taken.

During the year 1887 the employments committee of the Woman's Aid society received and distributed 1276 partly worn garments: 150 yards of material were received, from which 87 garments were made and distributed by the sewing committee, 175 persons procured employment through the efforts of the committee, and 5 [illegible] in positions to be self supporting.

Mr. Will O. Shipler, who was connected with the Leadville postoffice for the past two years, recently resigned his position, and has been appointed assistant postmaster of this city. Mr. Shipler highly accomplished from his [illegible] post where he served with great credit to himself as well as to the public. Judging from his recommendations, signed by a number of postoffice inspectors, he is entitled to rank among the best [illegible] clerks in the service.

A prominent citizen of the city is very desirous of seeing a well operated fire alarm system established in the city. He is of the opinion that it could be conducted with comparatively little expense, and could be operated by means of the electric light wires. The system which he proposes the city should adopt is similar to that in use in all the leading [illegible] cities, and works to perfection. In this city, where the buildings are so scattered, and so far removed from the central fire station, the benefits of such a system of fire alarm would be generally appreciated.

The contract was signed yesterday for the completion of Mr. W. H. Sanford's Queen Anne residence, on lot 5 Boulder crescent, the cost of the house will be $12,000. Mr. Joseph Dozier has the contract. Messrs Otis and Waterman have also signed a contract with Mr. A. H. Harrison for the erection of a [illegible] house on Cache La Poudre street near Weber. This building will cost about $5000, and is the second in a row of four houses. Messrs Farmer and Robinson have also contracted with Searcy and Tuckerman for the completion of a brick store on Huerfano street the cost to be about $12000. The designs and plans of all the above named work were furnished through the office of Architect Frank T[illegible]lent.

The attraction at the opera house next Monday evening will be the celebrated Howard Athenæum company. The company consists of twenty-five people and each one is an artist in his line. The Denver Republican in speaking of their opening performance in that city says: "The Howard Athenæum company gave a very attractive vaudeville performance at the Tabor last night to a large audience. The entertainment was in every way enjoyable, particularly the acrobatic tumbling and muscular exercises of the Arabs, the juggling of Le Claire, the wild dancing of Miss Lizzie Dyer who will be remembered as the old lady of the "Vacation" company and the sleight of hand tricks of Carl Hertz. The Vanishing Lady act by Carl Hertz was the neatest and most charming specialty soon ever presented in Denver. When first produced in London it created a genuine sensation."
